CSR: what do companies report on?

Analysis of European companies' reporting on their social responsibility

In the space of less than ten years, the PR of European companies on their social responsibility has increased spectacularly. Whether it be in a specific document, such as a report on sustainable development, or in their statutory information, such as an annual report, management report or risk review, the majority of listed companies publish strategic views and accounts of their targets, actions, results or risks on this subject.

This study is an assessment of the information published or sent to Vigeo by more than 700 companies in respect of their social responsibility over the period 2007-2009.
